

Rethinking Global Democracy in Brazil

Markus Fraundorfer
University of São Paulo

ROWMAN &
LITTLEFIELD
— INTERNATIONAL

London • New York

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Abbreviations	xiii
1 Introduction	1
New Realities, Old Structures	1
Old Structures, Undemocratic Structures	2
Brazil: A Laboratory for Democratic Experiments in the Tropics	6
Organisation of the Book	12
2 Democratising Global Governance	17
The Peculiarities of the Global Governance System	18
Ideal Types of a Democratic Global Order	22
Promoting Democratic Practices in Global Governance as People-Power	29
The Theoretical Framework: Three Indicators of People-Power	36
3 Brazil and the Purchase of Drugs	59
The Brazilian Way of Tackling HIV/AIDS	60
The Creation of UNITAID: One for All, All for One	63
Democratic Practices at UNITAID	73
4 Brazil and Food Security	85
Brazil's National Food Security and Nutrition Framework	86

The Reform of the Committee on World Food Security: New Beginnings	90
Democratic Practices in the Committee on World Food Security	109
5 Brazil and Open Government	127
The Participatory Budgeting Programmes	128
The Open Government Partnership: A New Paradigm?	132
Democratic Practices in the Open Government Partnership	148
6 Brazil and Internet Governance	161
The Regulatory Framework for the Internet	162
The NETmundial Meeting: A New Point of Departure in Global Internet Governance	165
Democratic Practices during the NETmundial Meeting	172
7 Conclusion	183
Rethinking Global Democracy in Brazil	183
A Pattern Emerges	186
Brazil's Future Role in Global Democracy	195
Interviews	201
Bibliography	203
Index	227